FaithCARE

What is FaithCARE?

FaithCARE began in 2007. A group of seasoned restorative justice practitioners and denominational leaders began to explore restorative approaches to healing relationships and repairing harm in churches. Since then FaithCARE has worked with 60 churches from 9 denominations in Ontario, supporting them to transform conflict and become restorative culture congregations.

FaithCARE is guided by an interdenominational Steering Group of Restorative Practice Practitioners and is a program of the Shalem Mental Health Network. Recently the International Institute of Restorative Practices, a partner in FaithCARE, featured FaithCARE's work at its annual international conference.

Built on the foundation of our learning so far, FaithCARE is pleased to offer training in helping faith communities implement a restorative, relational framework across congregational life.

Feedback from past conference attendees:

"This conference rates as the best conference I've attended in recent memory...I will be able to use what I've learned in a number of contexts, both in the immediate future and in the long term!"

"I appreciated how practical the training was and the many opportunities we were given to put into practice what was being taught."

Learning How to Grow Restorative Churches

A Collaboration Between FaithCARE, the International Institute of Restorative Practices (IIRP), CRCNA Safe Church, CRCNA Office of Social Justice, Diaconal Ministries Canada, BCNW and BCSE Safe Church Team Ministry Classis and BCSE Restorative Task Force

Part 1 - Interactive Classroom Training: April 11 - 13, 2019

Part 2 - Individualized Field Coaching

Day 1

What Does it Mean to be a Restorative Church?

Explore

- A relational framework and explicit practices that build stronger, more connected congregations and helps to heal relationships
- A restorative paradigm and language that underpins the practice
- A continuum of restorative practices in a church context
- How does this fit with our faith and living out the Gospel?

Day 2

Circles

Learn

- how to facilitate circles, through experiential, hands-on learning
- various types of circles and their differential uses in many church settings from meetings to study and discussion groups to decision-making
- circle dos and don'ts: how to prevent harm caused by poor circle practices

A Restorative Congregation lives out the belief that:

- every person has God-given worth
- no one is disposable
- conflict and harm can be most effectively addressed by attending to the healing of all persons affected

Day 3

Formal Restorative Conferences

Practice

- how to facilitate formal and informal conferences to deal with conflict and harm
- Changing the Conversation - how to move from adversarial to restorative approaches when dealing with conflict and harm
- Taking It Home: Next Steps
- Orientation to Part 2 of the training: individualized field coaching

*NOTE: this training is a prerequisite to further training required when dealing with serious occurrences in churches, including sexual misconduct.

FaithCARE's training consists of two parts. The Classroom Training (Part One) is provided by the IIRP, a leading international professional development centre in restorative practice. Our experience is that successful implementation is enhanced by field coaching. For that reason, FaithCARE offers individualized mentorship in implementation (Part Two) by FaithCARE Steering Group members. The training fee includes three situation-specific one-hour sessions with people who, having taken Part One, now seek to implement restorative practice in their congregation or denomination.

With Parts One and Two of the training, participants will have the tools they need to support the implementation of restorative practice in their congregation.

At the conclusion of the Classroom Training, participants will receive a certificate from the IIRP. At the successful completion of field coaching (Part Two), participants will receive a certificate from FaithCARE.

The Classroom Training will be provided by Bruce Schenk, Director, IIRP Canada

Bruce is a Lutheran pastor and a Founding Member of FaithCARE in Ontario. Bruce became the Director of IIRP-Canada in 2008. He has worked extensively with schools, justice, churches, communities and in other contexts across Canada in restorative practices training and development. Prior to working in educational and other settings, Bruce served in youth and adult justice, including as chaplain at Brookside Youth Centre in Cobourg Ontario and a policy analyst.
